When learning something new there are a lot of phrases, terms and theory to learn and when learning Azure the same is true. One of the things you should be aware of within Azure is the difference and use cases of Availability Zones and Availability Sets.. When we are architecting workloads we see availability is making sure the resources or workloads are there when you need them.

Understanding Availability Sets and Availability Zones

@MarkH72 click the staff menu item, choose the staff-member, you can make them unavailable/available for certain times or days of the week, or not available at all.. Unfortunately I have staff who are very variable in their availability and the only way I can figure out how to match them up with their 'shifts' is to give them 'time off' in the Bookings calendar for when they are unavailable.

Is it possible to make a staff member not bookable ...
